

Chris' favorite food was pickle potato chips. Chris wanted to eat them at (sour, for, every) meal. He wouldn't eat anything but (pickle, ate, vanilla) potato chips.

Chris ate chips for (eat, breakfast, food) instead of cereal and juice. He (ate, gave, the) chips for lunch instead of a (dog, sandwich, smelled) and fruit. Chris ate chips for (pickles, supper, no) instead of roast beef and corn. (Wanted, Teeth, He) even ate chips instead of vanilla (pickle, ice, and) cream for dessert.

Chris ate so (many, like, sour) chips he smelled sour like pickles. (Instead, His, Chris) hands, his clothes, and his breath (every, it, all) smelled sour. No one wanted to (hand, pour, talk) to Chris because of his sour (breath, night, long). The dog wouldn't even go near (Chris, even, pickle). The kisses Chris gave his mom (clothes, but, and) dad each night smelled like pickles (chip, because, but) his teeth smelled like pickles. It (were, didn't, over) matter how long he brushed his (night, for, teeth) or how much dental floss and (toothpaste, boys, like) he used. Chris couldn't get rid (of, for, and) the pickle smell.

Chris' mom and (food, how, dad) were becoming quite concerned about their (boys, son, brushed). Chips weren't healthy for growing boys. (Said, Besides, To), they didn't like the smell of (Chris, healthy, sour) pickles that had taken over their (home, the, night).

"I know how much you like (chips, bowl, kiss), Chris," said his father. "You eat (on, his, them) all the time, but growing boys (smell, had, need) more than junk food."

Chris listened (like, to, in) his dad as he munched on (a, of, but) pickle potato chip.

The next morning, (mom, Chris, listened) started to pour himself a bowl (munched, for, of) chips but stopped. He remembered what (himself, his, reached) dad told him.

"Why am I (long, always, cereal) eating chips?" he asked himself. He (decided, tasted, one) it was time to try something (all, new, big).

Chris reached for a box of (food, he, cereal). He dug out a couple of (boys, but, flakes) and took a tiny bite. The (box, and, cereal) tasted wonderful. Chris poured a big (bowl, dug, floss) of cereal and ate it all (juice, without, at) one pickle chip.

Now Chris can (pet, bite, couple) the dog and kiss his parents (besides, again, go).

Chris' favorite food was pickle potato chips. Chris wanted to eat them at (sour, for, every) meal. He wouldn't eat anything but (pickle, ate, vanilla) potato chips.

Chris ate chips for (eat, breakfast, food) instead of cereal and juice. He (ate, gave, the) chips for lunch instead of a (dog, sandwich, smelled) and fruit. Chris ate chips for (pickles, supper, no) instead of roast beef and corn. (Wanted, Teeth, He) even ate chips instead of vanilla (pickle, ice, and) cream for dessert.

Chris ate so (many, like, sour) chips he smelled sour like pickles. (Instead, His, Chris) hands, his clothes, and his breath (every, it, all) smelled sour. No one wanted to (hand, pour, talk) to Chris because of his sour (breath, night, long). The dog wouldn't even go near (Chris, even, pickle). The kisses Chris gave his mom (clothes, but, and) dad each night smelled like pickles (chip, because, but) his teeth smelled like pickles. It (were, didn't, over) matter how long he brushed his (night, for, teeth) or how much dental floss and (toothpaste, boys, like) he used. Chris couldn't get rid (of, for, and) the pickle smell.

Chris' mom and (food, how, dad) were becoming quite concerned about their (boys, son, brushed). Chips weren't healthy for growing boys. (Said, Besides, To), they didn't like the smell of (Chris, healthy, sour) pickles that had taken over their (home, the, night).

"I know how much you like (chips, bowl, kiss), Chris," said his father. "You eat (on, his, them) all the time, but growing boys (smell, had, need) more than junk food."

Chris listened (like, to, in) his dad as he munched on (a, of, but) pickle potato chip.

The next morning, (mom, Chris, listened) started to pour himself a bowl (munched, for, of) chips but stopped. He remembered what (himself, his, reached) dad told him.

"Why am I (long, always, cereal) eating chips?" he asked himself. He (decided, tasted, one) it was time to try something (all, new, big).

Chris reached for a box of (food, he, cereal). He dug out a couple of (boys, but, flakes) and took a tiny bite. The (box, and, cereal) tasted wonderful. Chris poured a big (bowl, dug, floss) of cereal and ate it all (juice, without, at) one pickle chip.

Now Chris can (pet, bite, couple) the dog and kiss his parents (besides, again, go).